Q: how to create resolute color picker on css My requirement is to pick color from a pixel on my mouse I have written some code for google chrome and Mozilla, but, in IE this code is not working because IE 9 and 10 does not support -moz-linear-gradient and -webkit-gradient Do anybody know how can I create a resolute color picker in IE? A: I think that adding a filter with a linear-gradient and box-shadow might do the trick. See CSS Tricks about this, Newtype Newtype is a specialised newspaper which publishes on the subjects of anime, manga, video games and other areas of popular Japanese culture. It is published monthly as a supplement of the Japanese edition of Weekly Shōnen Jump and contains articles and columns on such topics, plus reviews of anime and manga. Besides the regular edition, there is also a limited edition of 16 pages which contains a dedicated news section to anime, manga, and other Japanese culture topics. History and profile Founded in 1995, it was formerly the official publication of Newtype Japan. It is currently published by Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications, in association with Digital Manga Guild. Newtype is published on a monthly basis, with a few one-shot issues in mid- or late-September, each time for two consecutive years. In contrast to other Japanese English-language media, Newtype is not a critical review format, and includes only articles, interviews, and roundups of Japanese information. However, Newtype is one of the few English publications that reviews both anime and manga, and also is the largest English anime and manga media publication to be published monthly, as opposed to releasing a few issues a year. In addition to Newtype, Weekly Shōnen Jump also has a separate anime magazine Anime! Anime!, along with a "Jump Music" section, which summarizes music news. Anime! also has a companion magazine, Anime! Ace, which specializes in anime production. Newtype contains several news sections that focus on various anime-related fields. "Otaku Culture" is a collection of interviews with otaku. "New Video" is a collection of recent VHS and Laserdisc releases, "New Anime" is a collection of "new" anime DVDs and Blu-ray releases, and "Otakudom" is a collection of articles on anime and manga

Search The majority of retired policemen share the view that benefits should be reviewed and perhaps increased. But almost half (43%) also agree benefits should be cut or reduced, a new poll from ComRes has found. The equivalent ComRes poll for the Public Sector Workers' Union (PSWU) found that 63% of current public servants think there should be no increase in the basic rate of pension for new state employees in 2014/15 and 61% for new federal employees in 2016/17. Derek Beauchamp, pensions officer at PSWU, says: "In the ComRes poll for us, 50% agree on new-generation pensioners not having to pay PRSI, and 81% think a superannuation contribution for the state pension should be scrapped." Beauchamp says in the coming years the union will be "putting pressure on Government as part of the public sector pay campaign" to address these issues. PSWU members have seen their pay rise by around 4% this year. The poll results are not surprising, given the reliance on public sector pensions being squeezed by successive governments. "It has been a steady diet of pension cuts since the first of the year," says Beauchamp. He says that in 2014/15 there will be a 16% cut to superannuation, increasing again in 2016/17. He says in many cases the government is using its employment figures to justify cuts to pensions. "They are finding ways to justify lower and lower pay in an attempt to secure growth in the economy." But he added that retiring public sector workers were a "great asset" to the economy. "They contribute to the country. They help to run hospitals, schools and transport." Some 62% of retired policemen say they would support changes to the state pension. The current pension age is 67, with those aged 55 and over able to retire and at least 20 years on the job. People aged 55 and over can continue to receive the pension until they are 70 years of age. "If you are earning above €20,000 a year, you will not pay PRSI. It's very unfair that younger people pay PRSI on their earnings," says Beauchamp. The ComRes poll found 18% of retired policemen said
