What's new:

Tell us a bit about the game. MMORPG: We are developing a FREE MMORPG game set in the world of RuneScape. Players will be able to explore huge worlds and fight with players from around the world, eliminating their rivals and raising their rank in the game. We plan to bring this adventure to our fans in one of the most immersive gaming experiences ever made. What are some of the larger changes in terms of content that you have been integrating? MMORPG: We have huge changes with the design of our world, our gameplay, and the visual design. Players will be a united race living in harmony with one of the four Virtues: Anger, Healing, Wisdom, and Strength. This matches with the theme of the Lands Between in which Magic has overtaken the World of the Living. In the game, the Campfire fires across the land, allowing you to walk wherever you want, but at the same time, mysterious items that you might find useful in your struggles can be carried along, letting you unlock new content as you go along. With improvements to immersion by the overall art design, we hope to create a world in which players can become our main characters, following a personal story across, letting them immerse themselves in the game. For example, in addition to visiting beautiful cities and vast, well-designed areas, players will be able to fight their way through complex themed dungeons, carved with designs containing an amazing amount of depth. Also, featuring the action RPG modus, players will be able to customize their class according to their play style, such as enhancing their strength by continually equipping weapons, to create a character with varied skills. MMORPG: If you look at our trailer, the game seems very dynamic and chaotic. This is because we wanted to avoid the typical MMORPG boring dungeons and only focus on story. The action is extremely dynamic and we want to make sure that players will have a lot of heart-pounding moments even if they aren't fighting. MMORPG: We know that people are hungry for something new, so we also plan to develop the game with a completely new coat of paint from the beginning. We decided to change our color palette from the common grey-blue of other games to the bright and shining orange of a wild raging fire. Since we want to make the game a complete game from beginning to end, we want to make sure the design is a perfect fit for the world that we are creating and

Comparison of responses of iris and corneal endothelial cells to amino acid solutions and serum. In a model of edema-associated endothelial cell injury, human corneal endothelial cells (HCEC) and human iris pigment epithelial cells (HCEpi) were subjected to a variety of physiologic stimuli which can cause ocular edema and endothelial cell swelling. Corneal endothelial cells are protected by an intact anterior limiting lamina (ALL) to which they are attached. Loss of ALL, breaking of intercellular bridges, and loss of attachment to the underlying basement membrane are all damaging for endothelial cells. Exposure of HCEC to 1×10^{-3} M arginine or L-alanine resulted in a marked increase in cellular volume accompanied by a decrease in cytoplasmic refractility. A similar swelling was produced in HCEC by exposure to 50% serum but in these cells, there was no decrease in cellular refractility. The swelling of both cell types was greatest with the amino acid solutions at pH 7.5. HCEC failed to swell after exposure to 10% albumin, lactate, pyruvate, or L-glutamate. HCEC exposed to a variety of amino acids were indistinguishable from HCEC in terms of their
