I've known your father a long time, and had him on some of my showbiz radio programs. Anyway, I thought I'd call in, as I'm a huge fan of his work, and want to say what a horrible thing it is to see someone who once inspired us to do big, big things, like some of us were thinking we might go to Hollywood and be movie stars, and now his life is over, and he won't be able to do any of that ever again. So, I just wanted to say that, and I feel badly about that, and think it's a terrible thing to have to see somebody's life taken away from them, from fighting a hard battle against cancer, and other assorted ailments... What makes it a different issue is that I know that he had no idea about the cancer when he made the decision to have the surgery. It wasn't until a few days after that he found out he had the cancer. It wasn't until he was in the hospital that he had the first surgery. So, his surgeon said it was a great success, but it seems in hindsight, the surgeon failed to do more, and we know that as of this day, the cancer has returned. We want him to be healed and he wants to be healed. We are hopeful. At that point, which was a few days ago, the family just wants to see him come out of the hospital. They are hoping that this is going to be a healing for his body, and that it's going to be complete, or they hoped at the very least, that he could get a little bit of time, just for a minute, to be free of the cancer. I think that the family is hoping for a miracle. And from what I've heard, from various sources, he's been having some good results, and they're continuing to do the treatments as they are. But he's from my town, he was from my home town, I've known him since I
