- Story: This is a story about the impossibility of translating trauma. It is a story of the inability of trauma to be accurately or comprehensively translated into anything other than more trauma, even when the translation is an actual made-up language that emulates the intent of the original source material, spoken in the original language it was originally conceived in. - Toning: This is a story about the impossibility of translation through tone. It is a story of how trauma is best contained, how trauma can be cleaned up if it is compartmentalized. - Tonal shift: This is a story about the impossibility of translation through tone. It is a story about how trauma is most effectively communicated when it is locked away and incommunicable, when it is transmuted into a more manageable form and reduced to the level of a feeling instead of a perceived stressor. Ochitsubaki is a game about how trauma affects everyone differently. This is a game about how trauma affects everyone, but has a much clearer focus on mental health issues, because it is about non-binary gender identities, non-binary gender identities, and mental illness. When the camellias fall, every single immortal will be affected differently. This game is about non-binary gender identity in light of what happens when trauma is translated and incommunicable, which can be considered "transforming" trauma into a more manageable form. Disclaimer: I am a cis-het-male who played this story in two trans narratives, two gender identities, and two languages. Some people who are also comfortable playing female characters would do differently in their playstyle. —.:.:)◇ ◆ ◇(.:.:— ---

Main Story [Story] Being a performer in the space gauntlet in year 2222, you'll know about the rivalry between the eight idols on your team. However, no one has managed to reach the top by performing well enough to win the Space Idol Competition and thus take control of the entire Net Space! Your best friend Tsuruno has always been a fan of the Space Idols, and she has decided to enter the competition alongside you! Can you finish ahead of everyone else on your team and beat the five other Space Idols to take command of the entire Net Space?

[Playable Characters]

Natsuko Tsuruno (voiced by Reika Kurumizawa) (Subtitle: Tsuruno) A confident and popular girl with a bright personality. She's always ready to lend a helping hand. She's also got a cheerful and friendly disposition, which makes her a popular and well-liked character. Tsuruno makes a strong and loyal ally for you, and as you struggle against the other browsers on your team, you'll enjoy Tsuruno's cheering words of encouragement.

Mr. Unagi (voiced by Yasunori Masutani) (Subtitle: Mr. Unagi) Unagi is a legendary performer of the space gauntlet, and is very competitive. Like the star of the story, Mr. Unagi also has a strong and loyal personality, but he's also very polite and handsome. He respects and listens to your guidance, so there's no reason for you to think of him as a rival.

Reiko Eto (voiced by Anju Inuzuka) (Subtitle: Eto) Eto is in the same class as Tsuruno and Unagi, so it's natural for her to be friendly with them as well. She's a mature and focused person, but she also has a warm and cheerful personality. She's got the same spirit and the same drive as Tsuruno, so if you can become a good leader for her, you can work well together.

Nao Kadomo (voiced by Ryōka Kanda) (Subtitle: Nao) Kadomo is a quiet and gentle girl, but she's also very diligent. She wants to become a space idol, so she's working hard to get good at her performances. Kadomo

Review: Missing from early 1995 Aug 15, 2011 3:02 PM by Karl Teke (Internet Publiser) Alan: I received a message from Pat Early, saying that my review of Boulder Dash Deluxe (PB) was not being published this month. He said that PB had been released into the public domain after a new owner took over the company and decided to go separate ways on a fresh game. Later, there was an e-mail from Jack Hutchinson - looking for information about PB. After reading his message, I said that Pat's explanation did not add up and I was curious about how far they were going in cancelling every game they released in the 1990s. This game was out in 1995, so if they're going to withhold a game so late, something must have been up. They denied that that the game was released but later, they released it (by mistake). Pat: It's true that we've ended many 1980s and early 1990s game's distribution this year because 'higher powers' came in and said, "Please. Please. We can't let these games travel any further." They wanted to stick to the original distributions of the 1990s for fear of encountering promotional clips of games that were seen as being too controversial or too distasteful. It's a dilemma for us to represent all 1980s and 1990s-distributed games in a family-friendly manner even though those games didn't have any 'off-color' material. As for PB, I really can't say as I have just been told what happened. But I do know that it was released on disc. Had it actually been released on cartridge, I feel that I would, too. Jack: While I understand your position, I was just wondering what happened. You've only heard half of the story. Pat: Many of the 1990s- and 2000s-distributed games had discs ready to go that were waiting for new printings. In many cases, these discs have sat on store shelves for several years without any updates. (Imagine the horror of a Pinball Wizard cartridge that's been in a warehouse for two years!) In some instances, these discs are still on store shelves, but with the company attempting to hide the printings from unsuspecting customers. It's true that many (wrongfully) think that
