HONG KONG - A decision to grant permanent residency to a Hong Kong-born former trainer of pop star Sean Kingston is being viewed as a loss to former pro golfer Michelle Wie. Erik Wong was given permanent residency after a U.S. immigration judge ruled that it was unlikely he would face being returned to Hong Kong under the territory's "one country, two systems" policy. Wong, who had been in the United States since 2005, and his family had settled in Houston. He admitted in a court declaration that he was a fan of Kingston, who had taken the Hong Kong-born plastic surgeon as a stepfather last year. He also explained to the immigration judge that he had agreed to help Kingston's father in his back injury treatment. Wong said he was overjoyed when his application for permanent residency was approved, but he was disappointed that it seemed to exclude a resident visa. "I feel sorry for Michelle Wie, who I remember playing golf with at the U.S. Open just a few years ago," he told the Thomson Reuters Foundation in a telephone interview. He said a letter from Wie was part of the evidence that he submitted for his residency application. "It was written in her hand but she told me she had signed it," he said. Wie won a silver medal in the 2008 U.S. Open at Oakmont Country Club in Pennsylvania, becoming one of the youngest-ever golfers to do so. She has subsequently won the U.S. Women's Open in 2011 and 2013, as well as three LPGA events. "I've always spoken highly of Hong Kong because it's a very safe place to live," said Wong. "I'd like to keep here, I love Hong Kong, my wife and I love living here and we love our family."
