Since you did not specify your gameplay experience level there's really nothing more I can tell you. (CNN) The TSA stopped about 21.6 million people from flying last year because they showed up "exceptionally short" on scannable identification, according to the agency. The TSA revealed that number in a notice to Congress about its budget request for 2019, released Tuesday. The number represents about 4.7% of all the travelers screened at airports nationwide. Scannable ID includes things like passports, driver's licenses, and professional ID cards. It was not immediately clear what percentage of travelers were stopped from flying because of issues with scannable identification, or whether the pre-check program, in which travelers are selected to be screened quickly, played a role in those numbers. What's new:

. July 2, 2003 It's tough to tell whether a 3-1 lead is kicking ass or whether a 4-1 hole in the bottom of the eighth inning isn't staring us in the face. We aren't sure, but we're still hankering for a rematch. We meet again behind the Times Building on Fourth Street next Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. watch the road race this time, we bet it'll be like a World Cup final, first time round to win and then all the way home to the top. We'll be there! Your faithful Curling Partners are pumped; we don't even know what "weight room" is anymore. Curling has been rattling around inside our minds since everyone in Pittsburgh headed for the finish Sunday. Some days we may not even have a clue what button to push, but for the most part, we've got Curling downloaded and ready to go. Pudgy's taking half a day off today, so naturally, we're choosing to curl on the weekends. Finally on Monday, exhausted from the weekend's madness, we figure out that's what we do. We curl on the weekends because that's when we have time. (We'd like to apologize for the abysmal quality of the following video. It's a little over 12 minutes long. We recommend Blame it on the humidity.) The event began with a half-mile road race. Even from a distance it looked to be a hoot. Not really — it was exhausting. The UPC crew took the lead and have never really ceded it, despite repeated challenges. Over the last few laps, Joe, Liz and Roy, with a lead pack a few dozen yards back, all had a chance to claim first. Our side conceded, of course; we don't do that. The UPC side, which had three men taking turns pulling the car across the line, never had a chance. And when we caught up with Roy, who was the last man trying, we roared with laughter because he seemed so committed to finishing that he was gobbling up the infield on the inside of the course, pausing every third foot or so to eat the lone flamethrower on the field. Good job, Roy — you won your fifth straight UPC title. Championship: Lucas Haack, Age 29 (Men's Singles) At the winner's medal toss,
