DNA binding and sequence-specific interaction of Escherichia coli RNA polymerase to its own promoter. The sequence-specific binding of RNA polymerase (RNAP) to the promoter DNA of its own gene has been studied in vitro. The sequence-specific RNA polymerase-promoter interaction in vitro was evidenced by forming a complex between the E. coli RNAP and the promoter DNA at 25 degrees C, 35 degrees C, and 42 degrees C. In addition, the substrate DNA used in this study has the self-complementary sequence with a GC rich tail, which may facilitate the formation of DNA-DNA or DNA-RNA hybrid and stabilize the complex. Other possible explanations of the formation of a stable complex of E. coli RNAP with its promoter DNA have been suggested. Corrosion in steels is a well-known phenomenon and many attempts have been made to control, inhibit or reduce its detrimental effects. Corrosion in food products is of particular concern since the exterior appearance of such food products is one of the features by which the consumer discerns the quality of a particular food product. In particular, water absorption in food products can be highly undesirable. During the processing and packaging of food products it is frequently necessary to store and transport the products in bulk in a packaged form. This is particularly true of liquid-containing food products such as fruit juices, tomato sauce, etc. The food product to be packaged is typically fed to a packaging machine which includes a tank for holding the food product. The packaging machine may include a plurality of packaging units in order to increase the output of a particular machine. The storage tanks of the machine may be above ground or in a plant basement, or in a recessed or buried area. Such tanks are often washed with water to protect the goods stored therein from moisture entering the tank. As a result, the containers for storing the goods are particularly susceptible to corrosion. Corrosion in containers is obviously undesirable and may result in damage to the contents of the container. Moreover, corrosion in containers used for storing liquids results in the need to expend time, effort and expense in order to repair the container or replace the contents thereof. In the case of a food product, such expenditures may be very costly. Many attempts have been made to prevent or minimize the impact of the corrosive effects of water on containers. For example, as disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,389,745 issued to L. K. Spaulding, Jr., corrosion

Analysis of HLA-DRB1*0401 alleles in Khatami-tribe of Iran. The HLA-DRB1*0401 allele is an important serotyping marker. This study was designed to analyse the HLA-DRB1*0401 alleles in Khatami-tribe of Iran. This study was performed in the city of Sanandaj in Kurdistan province. The ethno-linguistic affinity of the Khatami and Kordash tribes and their geographical location has been shown. The DRB1*0401 allele was analysed in 47 individuals. Sampling and analysis methods were done by using molecular biology techniques. The investigated allele was identified in all the samples studied. In this study the frequency of HLA-DRB1*0401 was high in the Khatami tribe.

Q: Passing XML Data From JavaScript Back to Java I'm trying to make an Ajax call in JavaScript to pull data from my Java server, and then pass the data back to Java for processing. Right now, I can get the Java to receive the JSON string (which is a subset of the XML), but it won't decode the data, and throws an exception.
