To generate random shapes, I can use the following code: private void MainPage_Loaded(object sender, RoutedEventArgs e) { var randomShape = new Windows.UI.Xaml.Shapes.Polyline(); randomShape.Points.Add(new Windows.UI.Xaml.Input.Point(100, 100)); randomShape.Points.Add(new Windows.UI.Xaml.Input.Point(400, 400)); randomShape.Points.Add(new Windows.UI.Xaml.Input.Point(500, 500)); MainGrid.Children.Add(randomShape); } The problem is that the shape does not display itself in the layout editor (the shape is missing and the editor has no way to show it). The display shown is this: If I add the shape using code, the layout editor displays the shape with no problems. A: For XAML shape development, you need to add an AdornerDecorator for the shape first. This allows the shape to get into the visual tree. Without it, the shape won't display in the editor or on the device. For example, the following code will add a rectangle and a horizontal line to the visual tree.
