The internecine war of the kingdom of Pelion enters its final and decisive phase, leading to the death of the king of the citadel of Ithaca, around which all the events take place. When this happens, Ermilos, one of the bloodiest battles of the war, breaks out. The Ithacans manage to repulse the enemy, thanks to a secret defensive plan. For this, the girl Cassandra volunteers to go to the village of Echinus, where she is to lead the peasants in a revolt, but not only the enemy will be able to catch up with her, but also she will have to deal with strange tribes on the northern steppes who the Ithacans call "Chalcidian". In addition, Ermilos gets up to lead the rebels into the city, possibly to be betrayed. Cassandra will have to save herself, as well as the city, by adapting to the conditions of the war and, for the first time in the history of the Kingdom, a group of women will play a special role. .
