180. We are speaking about this reality. We are speaking about the fact that time has begun a journey that will lead to the final expulsion of the seeds of selfishness. These are not fancies, nor utopian hopes; they are a reality. Suffering is a living proof of the truth of our teachings and claims. It is a sign that our words can free many from fear. We will speak of these things. We will speak of the truth and of the goodness that we are able to communicate to others. We will speak of these things, and we will act. We will act, with courage and with confidence, in the certainty that this is what we owe to our children. [124] 13. "In today's globalised world, the problem of poverty cannot be discussed abstractly. We must bear in mind not only the objective forms of poverty, but also the subjective forms that give rise to it. The powerful influence of new forms of consumerism, the exploitation of the poor in the undeveloped world, the savage use of resources in the richer nations all reflect this situation. The authorities of the Catholic Church, which is God's universal moral agent and the great teacher of the world, cannot be silent on this issue. Here I would like to recall a fundamental approach to the problems of justice and freedom that can be applied in practical life. The fundamental principles of ecology are also becoming a priority. I would suggest that the first is that each of us is called to treat his or her own home as a temple of God. This means that, as Christians, we are invited to rediscover our connection with God, and the things that we own are a resource for our brothers and sisters as a community. We are to approach every relationship with those who are our own in a way that is able to recognize and respect them as individuals. The second principle is that of solidarity, under which we are called to create new forms of community life in which each person is important in the promotion of the common good. 5ec8ef588b
